Telekom's Sebit Receives "Distinguished Achievement Award of 2008"

Sebit, one of Turk Telekom companies, will provide educational software called Vitamin to 33 thousand schools for free.

Sebit General Manager Ahmet Eti stated that teachers and students will have access to Vitamin educational set, which is prepared for four main courses as Mathematics, Science, Turkish and Social Sciences, via internet in 2009-2010 educational year.

Eti said that the company carried out successful studies abroad with its educational programme called "Adaptive Curriculum" and that the company received an award. Noting that the company was given CORDIE award by SIIA (Software and Information Industry Association) in the Education Newcomer of the Year category, Eti said that the company was also given the "Distinguished Achievement Award of 2008" by the Association Educational Publishers.
